

Empowering Stakeholders to Make Places Great

25 MAY 2021, TUESDAY
11.30AM - 12.30PM SINGAPORE TIME (GMT+8)

A URA WEBINAR SERIES ON PLACEMAKING

Stakeholder engagement and community participation to shape places together are at the core of making great places. But what does participation mean in the co-creation and co-activation of our public spaces, particularly for a city like Singapore? As a planner, designer, resident or end user, how may we participate more meaningfully in creating loveable and great places in our communities?

Join us at our Placemaking Webinar as our speakers share their experiences involving various stakeholder groups in co-designing everyday spaces in Singapore. By using simple installations, contextual elements, and creative programming, the different projects will showcase how placemaking could empower individuals and interest groups, build social capital, and rethink urban spaces.

Following the presentations, there will be a Q&A segment for you to interact with the panel, so prepare your questions early!

People & Places Partnership

As part of our plans to develop capability and cultivate partnerships in placemaking, URA is organising a series of webinars as a platform for practitioners or people who share a common passion for placemaking to share tips and best practices, and learn more about placemaking through mutual exchange of information. These sessions are meant to encourage cross-organisation and cross-regional collaboration, as well as to establish and sustain a culture of sharing and trust.
