

WORKSHOP SERIES

Project Management for IT Projects and Construction Projects : Learning Points from a Tale of Two Disciplines

 New Date

WORKSHOP OVERVIEW

Project Management for the Construction Industry is complex and requires digital tools, management methodologies and character to manage the project successfully. They are conditions for success. However, when compared to Project Management for Smart City Projects and IT projects, one would see that there are similarities and difference that we can learn from each industry.

This workshop discusses on the similarities, differences and the tools used by Project Managers in the two worlds and industry, providing some insights of best practices between the two.

Eugene teaches at the National University of Singapore since 2008 and also volunteers teaching at other Local and Foreign Universities.

In February 2023, Eugene left Surbana Jurong Group to join the Meinhardt Group, a multi-disciplinary and international design and engineering company that is head quartered in Singapore. He undertakes the role of Global Director of the Group and the Chief Operating Officer of the Singapore office, with the strategic focus to improve the company's performance through the adoption of digital and technology, sustainable and resilient practices and increasing their competitive edge all round. He reports directly to the Group CEO and to the Board.

In Meinhardt, Eugene has carried out two Sustainability Reporting for GRI and is continuing this effort in Metav Cost and Contract Management. He continues to maintain the cost and contracts management of the firm and is now looking at data analysis for cost management and contracts management for the firm.
